A report-back from the presidential election in El Salvador

After centuries of repression and 30 years of struggle for liberation, The progressive movement has won the presidential elections in El Salvador!

Movement organizations and their accompanying political party, the FMLN, are the latest addition to the breathtaking leftward shift happening throughout the western hemisphere.

Delegates who observed the elections will report on how the left was able to unify and organize for victory in the presidential election, despite massive attempts to defraud the election on behalf of the right-wing.
